 Abstract: in this study, was been compared and evaluated the Human Development index (HDI) of rural-urban in marginal regions of ILAM city (Banbur, Bancharmag & Kamarbandy) within average of these indexes in the province and country in 2006. All the main statistics were collected in 2004. For the best comparison, Inventory of socio-economical structure of illegal settlements of llam city was been constructed and executed in the sampled households. The validity of questionnaire was $\alpha = 0.62$ with the Alpha Cronbach. The results of document collection of statistics and with comparison to questionnaire's consequences were stated undeveloped and unequal distribution of expense-income and indexes. These results were accompanied to theoretical frame (Giddens, Simmel & Merton) of the study. Migration in these regions was been arisen from cultural-social repellents of village and wasn't economical repellents of it and nor economical allures of urban and so was structured in kinship. The literacy of parents was positive and main effective variable (Independent) especially on female and girls literacy in these regions which is been obtained by hypothesis test and description of Beta gradient on effect of independent variable toward dependents variables. Occasionally, this study was shown new findings about structural situation of marginal regions in llam city and in conclusion was been stated charts and offers.
 Keywords: urban sociology, urban social pathology, marginal regions of llam city, statistics and development indexes.
